I will review the book Chocolate by Janet Hardy-Gould. This book is about chocolate. I will describe the summary and explain why I recommend this book.

By the way, you think that chocolate is sweet and delicious, don't you? Chocolate contains a lot of sugar and milk. So, many people, from children to adults around the world love chocolate. Then, do you know the origin of chocolate? Long time ago, Maya made chocolate from cacao beans for the first time. But it was different from today's chocolate. It tasted bitter and they enjoyed it as drinks. In addition, it was often drunk even with species. This is very surprising for people today because we think it natural that chocolate is sweet. This book changes our notion of chocolate. We get a chance to think about things around us from a different point of view. That is why I recommend this book.

Although the story changes, have you ever thought about where cacao comes from? Many of them are from developing countries, such as Ivory Coast and Ghana. In those countries, there are many children who have to work at a cacao plantation for rich countries at a low wage. Even if they want to go to school, they have to work to support their family finances. To deal with this problem, we can try "fair trade". Fair trade is a system for laborers to receive fair prices. Nowadays, we can see "fair trade" products in many stores. If we buy one, we can help someone living far from here. We, as consumers, have to think about what we can do for the future. As the first step to think about the future, this book offers information about realities hidden in chocolate. That is the second reason I recommend this book.

In conclusion, I recommend this book because you can learn that what you think is natural is not true. Also, it will give you a chance to review your daily actions. Overall, I think that "Chocolate" is one of the books you should read at least once.

I will review the book Factfulness by Hans Rosling. This book is about ten reasons we're wrong about the world and why things are better than you think. I will describe the summary and explain why I recommend this book.

To begin, this book discusses our problem is that we don't know what we don't know, and even our guesses are informed by unconscious and predictable biases. We see the world in an exaggerated way. But the world is getting better than we think.

I would recommend this book because this book changes the way you see the world and we can keep discovering new things. First, we focus more on the bad than the good. If you hear something bad, ask yourself. Is there really only one bad side? If you ask that you will realize that there are more good sides than bad ones. Second, you will learn how to look at graphs because there are many graphs in this book. By seeing lots of graphs, you might see a completely different world from the one we have imagined. You'll see the graphs differently than you did before you read this book. Therefore, I would recommend it.

In conclusion, I recommend this book because this book changes the way you see the world and we can keep discovering new things. Overall, I think that Factfulness is about understanding how our instincts program us to exaggerate situations and distort our perception of reality in ways that further exacerbate problems and how we react to them. We can learn a fact-based view of the world from this book.

I will review the book The Fantastic Forest by Susan E. Goodman. This book is about the trees and animals in the forest. I will describe the summary and explain why I recommend this book.

To begin, this book discusses forest communities. The forest's communities are made up of many kinds of things. Example there are so many plants, animals and bugs. All of them are living together and we are helped by them to live on the earth. Of course the forest is very important for the earth too. Therefore, we have to help each other and work hard to protect the forest's communities and the earth's environment.

I would recommend this book because we have to learn more about forest and there are so many lives we must save. First, if we don't know about the forest, we might harm it, then it will decrease. Second, there are so many lives which can't live in other places. Of course, endangered species are living too. If they all died, the environment changes, and it influences the ecosystem. To stop this happens, we have to save the lives that living in the forest. Therefore, I would recommend it.

In conclusion, I recommend this book because the ways to protect the environment are to learn about the forest and to save lives to live together. Overall, I think that everyone should learn and work for other species and help each other with lives in the forest.

I will review the book Your Five Senses by Robert Quinn. This book is about the five senses. I will describe the summary and explain why I recommend this book.

To begin, this book discusses the five senses. We have five senses called sight, hearing, smell, taste and touch. The sight is seeing things with our eyes. The hearing is hearing things with our ears. The smell is smelling things with our nose. The taste is tasting things with our tongue. The touch is touching and feeling things with our skin. Such senses have complex mechanisms and different help. Five senses give us lots of information about the world around us.

I would recommend this book because it is easy to understand the mechanism of the five senses and this book explains some people who can't hear and see well. First, it is easy to understand the complex mechanism of the five senses. For example, sense of taste. Taste buds, meaning mirai in Japanese, detect all the tastes when we touch food with our tongue. Then our gustatory nerves take the information to our brain. Second, this book explains some people who can't hear and see well. For example, about something they use to supplement hearing and sight. Some people who don't hear well use hearing aids or cochlear implants. Some people can't see well can read Braille by feeling with their fingers. Therefore, I would recommend it.

I will review the book Wonders of the Past by Kathryn Harper, a book about ancient buildings and treasures. I will describe the summary and explain why I don't recommend this book.

To begin, this book discusses the history of ancient buildings and the connection between buildings and people's lives. My favorite building in this book is Petra. Petra was a city built on the Pink Cliffs. People made temples, a theater and so on in Petra about 2000 years ago! Many of the buildings are still cloaked in mystery, but they are closely related to the way of people's life, Wars, religion, entertainment and the surroundings of the land at the time. It is an unchanging fact that we still know very little about how people lived thousands of years ago.

I would not recommend this book because there are not many details on each topic, and there are limited explanations of the civilizations. First, I'd like to know more stories and facts about each of the remains. However, I feel like this aspect of the book is missing. For example, although part of the information about how people built "Angkor Wat" is known today, there was little mention of it in the book. Second, only fact is used in the book. While I know the author can't write fiction in an educational book, I'm interested in theories that are presented by researchers and experts, so I was left feeling a little unsatisfied. Therefore, I would not recommend it.

In conclusion, because of the lack of theories and imagination in this book, I do not recommend it. Overall, although I was left unsatisfied by the presentation of information, I think that this book makes people have more interested in the history behind the ancient building of the world.

I would recommend this book because we can learn how great our bodies are and it is interesting to see the pictures of cells. First, we can learn how great our bodies are. For example, when some germs get into our body, the white cells kill them and make our body safe. It may be natural, but this work is done unconsciously! Also, your heart is as big as your fist, and it pumps blood all around your body. Isn't this amazing? Second, it is interesting to see the pictures of cells. There are pictures of muscle cells, red blood cells, nerve cells, and so on in this book. You can learn about your body deeply through the pictures. Therefore, I would recommend it.

I will review the book Speed Queens by Rod Smith. This book is about three women top racers in different countries. I will describe the summary and explain why I recommend this book.

To begin, this book discusses women racers' difficulties for success. Three women in this book are the top racers in their countries. However, there were many men who thought that was not interesting. Some men drivers had thought that races were for men. But the women didn't give up and did very well in their races. So many other women racers wanted to become racers like them.

I would recommend this book because they are so cool and we may be able to become brave. First, I think they are so cool because they did not stop racing, even men racers said "a woman can't win". They kept believing in themselves. Second, I think a lot of girls can be brave to be inspired by them. Girls will get courage to challenge things which many people think are difficult for girls. Therefore, I would recommend it.

In conclusion, I recommend this book because the three women in this book are so strong and we can get encouragement from them. Overall, I think that it is not important whether we are girls or boys. The most important thing is believing in ourselves.

Today I will review the book Weddings by Christine Lindop. This book is about weddings around the world. Before I get started, I want to introduce two important words that I will be using in my slide show today. The first word is bride. It means the woman getting married. The second word is groom. It means the man getting married.

Now I will get started by introducing the summary. To begin, this book discusses one of the happiest days in our life - weddings! There are many types of weddings such as traditional weddings and destination weddings. Traditional weddings are cultural weddings based on your living area, for example, in a Jewish wedding the groom has a custom to break the glass. Destination weddings are weddings held away from your house. For example, people who live in cold places tend to have weddings in hot places by the sea. Like this, this book explains about weddings around the world by giving particular examples. This is one of the reasons I recommend this book. When we are given particular examples, we can have a clear image. This will help you imagine your ideal future wedding.

My next reason is that you can learn important things about weddings. This book not only explains about the world's weddings, but also explains important things like wedding dresses, wedding rings, money and what to do before and after the wedding. This will also help you imagine your ideal future wedding.

In conclusion, I recommend this book because you get to learn about weddings around the world and it will help you imagine your ideal wedding. I hope that you can enjoy reading this book and blowing up your image about your wedding.

To begin, this book discusses dinosaur's life and features. Stegosaurus which was about 9 meters long and 4 meters tall. It had bony studs to protect its neck, hard plates along its back and spines on its tail. It ate plants. That means it didn't need sharp plates and tails. If it ate plants, why did it have sharp plates and tails? Imagine living in the time when Stegosaurus is alive. If a meat-eater attacks it, it swings its tail and hits it with its spines! Many kinds of dinosaurs devise their life to live safely.

To begin, this book discusses energy in the world. We use energy for everything that we do. For example, we use heat energy, sound energy, light energy and so on. Energy can make things work, make things move and make things happen. People use energy to work and to play, but I think we use too much energy, including myself. What can we do?
